Washington, DC- On Wednesday, Congressman Harry Teague hosted students from the New Mexico Military Institute in his Capitol Hill office. The student group, including students from Roswell and Alamogordo, was visiting the nation's capitol as part of the Close Up Foundation program which provides a Washington, DC civic education experience to almost 700,000 students nationwide. The NMMI students ranged from high school juniors to college freshman.

The students met with Congressman Teague and discussed their program at NMMI, as well as Teague's efforts for veterans and the military, including his newest legislation, the Energy Jobs for Veterans Act. They also discussed issues including border control, job creation and healthcare.

Congressman Harry Teague, D-NM, meets with students from the New Mexico Military Institute